Our halls are alive with the sound of music

Sonia Holiad, Executive Director

On the 25th day of September, 1961, the Honourable John Yaremko, then Provincial Secretary and Minister of Citizenship, affixed his seal on the Letters Patent that created St. Vladimir Ukrainian Institute, renamed St. Vladimir Institute (SVI) by Supplementary Letters Patent in 1976.

"St Vlad's," or "The 'Tute," as it would become known at the time, was to be a residential facility for "Ukrainian-Canadian students attending public, vocational and trade schools, colleges and universities or other educational institutions in the said City of Toronto."

With 46 units, the Institute went on to provide a home-away-from-home to thousands of students, some of whom moved their own children into the residence decades later.

Although I'd been active at SVI since my university days, I wasn't ready for the whirlwind of student activity when I took on the role of Executive Director in September 2019. My personal "office door always open" policy, with the dining room just 27 feet away, put me in the middle of endless comings and goings, loud and lively conversations, an often blaring television, spontaneous singing and occasional talks with students who leaned on my doorframe and struck up conversation. I learned to focus on work while filtering out the sounds of CP24, SCI-FI Channel reruns, and noise from all directions.

Then came COVID-19 and our flock of residents quickly dwindled. A handful stayed through the summer but we rarely saw them. With most of our tenants working from home and our building closed to the public, there were weeks when the Institute felt like a ghost town.

September brought 17 students -- some new and some returning -- and a fresh perspective on our residence. Gone was the daily cacophony of sounds from the dining room. In its place were audible snippets of intriguing conversation floating into my office: discussions about everything from pressing social issues to the logistics of launching an opera company, from the finer points of complex audio-visual equipment to spirited analysis of classical composers and their creations. There were theories on behaviour and stories from childhood. There were socially distanced video games on our big screen. But, best of all, there was live music.

A number of our current residents are music students because music courses offered some component of in-person instruction during the fall term. Other residents not studying music are simply musically gifted. With a small cohort and a largely empty building, every space became rehearsal space. Jenn's virtuoso violin riffs, Emily's rich woodwind notes, and Charlotte's soaring soprano vocals carried from the banquet halls on our lower level. Ben's operatic baritone flowed from our theatre, and Tilman could be found sharpening his viola skills with repeated scales, his easel set up outside the lower floor elevator. Victoria parked her electric piano in an alcove of our lobby. Michael passed through the main-floor corridor, mask in place, growling "I Was a Teenage Werewolf" or fearlessly singing a Broadway hit. Occasionally, Thaddeus set up his synthesizer and gathered a few residents to jam on the stage. In our pandemic-altered world, it was a joy; different and yet very much in tune with the vision of our founders, many decades ago.
