Tomorrow is not an ordinary "Giving Tuesday"

Before COVID-19, our "Giving Tuesday" appeals were a way of reminding you of the value of St. Vladimir Institute as a gathering place in which fellowship, education, culture and just-plain belonging were the order of the day.

Giving Tuesdays were a simple reminder to please send a donation our way to help us keep serving our community.

This Giving Tuesday is different.

With significant rental income lost to COVID-19, and with none on the horizon; without the anticipated income from summer students in our residence; with no cultural programs for the public; with the very real possibility of universities not returning to full in-person classes in September -- meaning students will study from home or take a gap year -- SVI is in a precarious position. Quite simply, our operating funds will run out.

If you've been thinking about financially supporting SVI, this is the time to show that support, please. And if you haven't, we ask you to do so.

Please support us now, so that when we're able to gather again, we have an Institute vibrant with activity to which we can return. Thank you.
